HE WAS A HATED MAN

JOHN C. BRAIN, LAST PRISONER OF THE CIVIL WAR,

Hero of Some of the Most Desperate and Thrilling Achievements of the Confederate Navy Is In Kansas City.

Commander John C. Brain, the Hobson of the Confederate many, who for years was said to be the man most haird by the North by reason of his being the only man to succeed in cutting a vessel out of New York harbor during the war, is at the Savoy. He bears no malice for the appellation, or for the suffering which he endured as a prisoner of war years after peace was declared—the last prisoner of the rebellion, in fact, to be released.

'President McKinley's trip to the South will have a moral effect, the strongest of any event since the close of the war." any event since the close of the war," he said yesterday. "He showed himself to be the president of all the people. The Southerners gave him ovations along his natire route to show their appreciation of the liberality of mind which every speech disclosed. In his pretty speech to the colored students and in his addresses to the crowds that greeted him at Atlanta and other points the people of the South heard a president, the first to come to them, who was free from sectional prejudice. I wish he could have gone to Mobile and New Orleans and around through Texas. The and around through Texas. The I effect would have been great beyond leans and around through Texas. The moral effect would have been great beyond anything we could estimate.

"The South is for expansion and McKinley has boldly declared that the country shall not be bound in a nutshell. It is to become one of the great nations. Already the effect of the last war can be seen in the shipping reports. A few months ago it was an American ship or a Yankes ship that entered a toreign port. Now it is a United States vessel. The United States is a new nation in the knowledge of many foreigners which has arisen out of Yankeedom."

Commander Brain is a man to whom attention is drawn by a large sear on his forehead. He bears four other sears, received in the same battle, Bermuda Hundred, while commanding a naval lattery, in May, 1861. He appears to be 62 years old, but he says he is growing younger and his form straightening, and soon he expects to discard his cane, as he did his last crutch, a few months ago. While a naval prisoner he contracted disease on account of which he was unable to waik unassisted for seven years. With his experiences as a naval commander, born of a naval family and educated at Annapolis, and with a splendid voice, he found the lecture field a remunerative one, since the revival of interest in the subject which he mastered years ago.

Story of His Life.

Story of His Life.

The story of his life is crowded with interest. He is a nephew of the late Rear Admiral Brain, who died last February. He graduated at the head of his class at Annapolis in 1853. He was on the United States frigate Congress when the war broke out. Being a Southerner by birth, he resigned and offered his services to the Confederacy and was made naval agent for his government in Europe.

It was upon his return in 1832 that he made himself conspicuous by an act that made his capture and punishment one of the dearest wishes of the Federal navy department from that time until its accomplishment.

He was then 22 years old. With nineteen men, dressed in citizens' clothes covering their uniforms, he boarded the Chesapeake in New York, harbor and at a signal disclosed the nature of their mission by throwing off their outer garments and demanding the surrender of the entire crew. Successfing in this, they paroled the sallors and put them alboard a steamer in the Bay of Funda.

With the Chesapeake he cruised along the Admiral Brain, who died last February.

With the Chesapeake he cruised along the With the Chesapeake he cruised along the coast, capturing many merchant vessels. He was placed in charge of blockade runners many times and did effective work. In September, 1851, he concealed himself with four seamen and five officers on the Boanoke at Havana and when off the Cuban coast captured her. At Bermuda he fitted her out with a crew. He captured the St. Mary's, a merchant vessel, at Poutsen river on the Chesapeake hay, June 19. Three months after, peace was declared, He took her and her 34,09,00 cargo to the West Indies, and, learning there that the war was over, he blew up and destroyed her off Port Antonio.

He stated yesterday morning that in his opinion the first week of the session would be devoted to caucusing by the Populists and that he, as a Republican representative, would not be invited to the star chamiler gatherings. Mr. Cabbison is of the opinion that the extra session will continue until the new legislature crowds the Populists out. Representatives Taylor and Armstrong and State Senator Henry Zimmer expect to attend the opening of the resiston. It is understood that Governor Leedy will have some fin in trying to control the votes of Armstrong and Taylor. Both are Populists, or rather Taylor is a Populist and Armstrong a fission Democrat. Mr. Armstrong recently stated to a reporter for The Journal that Leedy had written him several letters relative to the extra session in which he tried to extract from him a piedge to support certain legislation. Mr. Armstrong said that he never answered any of the letters and that he would not promise to support any of the governor's pet measures without first investigating their merits.

Representative Armstrong, as well as other Populist and Democratic members of the legislature, were ignored by Governot Leedy in the distribution of patronase and Mr. Armstrong, for one, does not feel indebted to him in any sense.

Persons who rely upon domestic filters to purify the water for household use will be interested to learn that, on the authoraty of the state board of health of Mary-land, such filters may steadily lose efficiency until they become first-rate culture chency until they become first-rate culture beds for bacteria, says the Sanitarian. An example cited is that in the case of a man in Baltimore who sends the whole water supply of his house through a large filter, and subsequently puts his drinking water through one of the small domestic filters common in the market A test showed that, on a day when the city taps were running 510 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, the large filter was delivering 5,900 bacteria in the same quantity of water. When the large filter was repocked only nine bacteria. the large filter was delivering 2,500 bacteria in the same quantity of water. When the large filter was repacked only nine bacteria per continueter got through it, but the same water, when passed through the small filter came out with seventy-one bacteria per centimeter. A further example is cited from the office of the Baltimore health department, where a filter supposed to be the best in the market was in use. The effectiveness of that filter was so short-lived that the precaution was observed of boiling the water after it was filtered.

Tricks of the smugglers are various, and Tricks of the smuggers are various, and some of the methods employed continually to nortly evade the 25 per cent duty which the United States government demands on all cut diamonds imported into this country are of interest. Diamonds bought abroad are usually of the finest quality, for Americans insist upon having the best. In order to reduce the duty to be paid on these the exact reverse of a scheme by which millions of money was made nearly twenty years ago is being largely resorted to. An ordinary commertally white five carat stone may be worth 8150 per carat, with small increase in fine ness up to $50, or even more, but the exfreme of bine white, true in color and per-fect, will rise in value up to $1.00 per curat. The object was to make a light yellow stone, worth $50 per carait, to look like fine white or blue white, and to get like fine white or bine white, and to get a price accordingly.

The cate French "diamond doctor" had light yellow and other off color stones cut in the old fashions of 1750 to 1850, mainly in sizes up to three carats, and some a little larger. These were arranged for rings and brooches and set in exact copies of oldtime settings, generally of silver, for close mounting, and not in claws. Previous to setting the light, off colored stones were given, on the back, a coat of very fine, hard drying blue aniline varnish of the right shade, which entirely overcame the yellow, making the diamonds appear "bine white," without losing any of their brilliancy.

It is a curious fact that in London last week exactly as many boys as girls were born—1,348 of each, making 2.656 in all. Such a "tle" is of rare occurrence. There was, however, a similar equality in the second week of May, 1851, when 1,167 of both boys and girls were born. Last week there was the large excess of 1.250 births over deaths in London. The deaths were relatively fow, giving a rate of only 18.3. Fourteen deaths were attributed to influenza, making a total of fifty-one in the past month. On the other hand, there were fewer fatal cases of zymotic disease, 121, than in any week for over a year,

Why he's a regular snow plow. And he does it well, ton."

What a little mite, and how comical, I wonder if he's hungry." She called him in as soon as he-hand finished, but he would not take time for more than a cup of caffee. Too busy.

"What are you going to do with the money?" asked the man as he insisted on settling at a quarter.

"I'm going to get mother a shawl for Christmas. She wearin one you can see through, and it aim right."

On he went with his glowing cheeks and his cheery whistle. But they find his name and address, I was the wife who took a shawl to the mother, and it was the hunband who installed the sturdy little snow shoveler as office boy in a bright new minimum of the command with permission to whistle when he feels like it.

"Is your sister at home?" asked the sprace young man at the door.

"Yes," answered the terrible little brother, "but you better not come in. Jest make a sneak and I won't say nothin' to her. Say, she's writin' a Chris mus story. Her hair is tangled, her skirt sugs in the back, she hain't got no collar on, and she's wear-in' her crooked-heeled shoes without lach cem. She throwed me out ten minutes are in her crooked-heeled shoes without lacin' em. She throwed me out ten minutes ago, and then had the nerve to tell mother that I broke her all up. 'Course it don't make no difference to me, but if I was you I'd never let on I'd been here at all. She's got the allifredest temper when she's writin' Chris'mus stories ever you saw?' Then the young man recaptured his card, tiptoed off the verandah and was around the corner by the time the impish brother was doing a war dance on the best carpet in the house.
